

Analogy for Exploring Spaces for Vocation on Campus<sup>1</sup>

When Ohio State University wanted to repave their sidewalks, they waited for it to snow and then looked to see where there were tracks in the snow. They used those tracks as a map for where the new sidewalks should go.

Where are your students already making connections to mission and purpose on your campus? Essentially, where are the places they are already walking that we could think about paving for them?

---

<sup>1</sup> From Carter Aiken (Blackburn College)